When i went and got seen by several different doctors i was told many different things. The one test that kept coming up positive was tonsillitis. I called off one day and my boss told me i was fone the day before and i shouldn't be calling off and that im not sick im just lying. I missed several days of work and then called off again she ended up firing me through text message. A few weeks to a month later she ended up getting fired for lying on the order forms for the product. I dont have to make up being sick. Worked at subway to and that same thing happened when i stopped to catch my breath and to slow my heart rate down. Subway dont give 30 minute breaks at all but dare anyone to get sick they get fired on the spot. I will be moving out of state to better my life and hoping all the hate in work places stop and in the world. Paid sick leave needs to be amended big time. Only people who ever get paid sick leave are the big timers the huge managers and owners
